A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on March 29, 2005 has been entered.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 7, 10, and 24-33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chen et al (US Patent No. 5,079,017) in view of Boudreau et al (US Patent No. 4,267,195) and Paluch (US Patent No. 6,312,746).

Chen et al disclose a flavorant obtained by heating an oil/fat and a sulfur-containing compound, such as cysteine (see entire patent, especially claims 1 and 14).

The claims differ as to the presence of a second palatability enhancer and the specific use of the product in an animal food.

Boudreau et al disclose it is well known that cysteine (nitrogen and sulfur containing) serves to increase palatability for dogs (see entire document, especially the abstract).

Art Unit: 1761

Paluch discloses conventional pet food components including hydrolyzed meat protein (see entire patent, especially Table 2).

It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to use the flavorant of Chen et al in an animal food product because the use of nitrogen/sulfur containing compounds in pet foods is conventional in the art.

Applicant is using known components to obtain expected results. All of the claimed components are well-known in the art and are used for their art-recognized function. Applicant's claims are directed to product claims and as such do not exclude process limitations of the prior art.
